His father and grandfather were pastors. His mother was a school teacher. She taught him how to read, even before he went to school.

Martin Luther King Jr loved reading. He also loved singing, riding his bicycle and playing football and baseball.

When Martin Luther King Jr was growing up, children (or grown-ups) who had different colored skin could not be friends and do things together. He wanted everyone to be friends.

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr was very smart and really good at writing and saying things that make people want to be their best.

He wrote about his dream for everyone to be friends, no matter what color their skin were.

On April 4, 1968, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr was killed by someone who did not like his words.
Now he is an Angel in Heaven with God.

Many years later, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr's dream came true and many children with different colored skin play together, go to school together and are very good friends.

They are some children and grown-ups who still don't want to be friends, but that is not what God wants, He wants us all to love each other.

You can do good things like Dr. Martin Luther King, just love God and others as yourself and do your very best in everything you do.
